POST COMMUNION PRAYER:

(to be said by congregation and chaplain)
God our Father, whose Son, the light unending, has come from heaven to deliver the world,
from the darkness of ignorance: let these holy mysteries open the eyes of our understanding that we may know the way of life, and walk in it without stumbling; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen

RESPONSORIAL PSALM 66

(R.). Come now and see the works of God, who holds our souls in life.

Be joyful in the Lord, all you lands; sing the glory of his name; sing the glory of his praise. Say to God, "How awesome are your deeds! Because of your great strength, your enemies cringe before you. (R.)

All the earth bows down before you, sings to you, sings out your name." Come now and see the works of God, how wonderful he is in his doing towards all people. (R.)

Bless our God, you peoples; make the voice of his praise to be heard; who holds our souls in life, and will not allow our feet to slip. For you, O God, have proved us; you have tried us just as silver is tried. (R.)

You brought us into the snare; you laid heavy burdens upon our backs. You let enemies ride over our heads; we went through fire and water; but you brought us out into a place of nourishment. (R.)

PAULINIUS, Archbishop of York, who died at Rochester on 10 October, 644, was a Roman monk in St Andrew's monastery at Rome, and was sent by St. Gregory the Great in 601, with St. Mellitus and others, to help St. Augustine and to carry the pallium to him. He laboured in Kent — with the possible exception of a mission to East Anglia about 616 — until 625. Then he accompanied Ethelburga, the sister of King Eadbald of Kent, when she went to the Northumbrian Court to marry King Edwin, then a pagan.

Before leaving Kent, he was consecrated bishop by St. Justus, Archbishop of Canterbury. He was successful in converting Edwin and large numbers of his people: the king's baptism took place on 12 April, 627. With the assistance of St. Edwin, he established his See at York and began to build a stone church there.

His apostolic labours in instructing and baptizing the people of the north country were unceasing, and tradition perpetuates his ministry at Yeavinger, Catterick Bridge, Dewsbury, Easingwold, Southwell, and elsewhere, while his own name is preserved in the village of Pallingsburn in Northumbria. On the defeat of St. Edwin in 633, Paulinus carried the queen and her children safely to Kent; and, as the heathen reaction under Penda made missionary work impossible in Northumbria, he devoted himself to the Diocese of Rochester, then vacant. It was after his flight that he received the pallium from Rome (634), sent to him as Archbishop of York.

Though Anglican writers have disagreed among themselves as to whether he was justified in leaving his archbishopric Catholic writers, following St. Bede, have held that he had no choice and was the best judge of what was advisable under the circumstances. St. Bede describes him as tall and thin, with a slightly stooping figure; he had black hair and an aquiline nose and was of venerable and awe-inspiring aspect.

He was buried in his church at Rochester, and, on the rebuilding of the cathedral, his relics were translated by Archbishop Lanfranc to a silver shrine where they lay till the Reformation. His festival is observed in England on 10 Oct., the anniversary of his death.
